Mini Holland for Tufnell Park ?

- Researchers of Waltham Forest's Mini Holland scheme suggest local children will live longer as a result (see article below). In Tufnell Park, St George's and Junction Wards are already partly (but incompletely) filtered to traffic in residential areas so relatively minor changes would have a big impact. The growing number of local play streets suggests to me that there is support for less car domination. All areas would still be accessible by motor vehicles but walking and cycling would have priority with special consideration about accessibility to local shops & amenities. Does anybody else think this would be a positive development?
